Parat works to provide you with the best possible working life

You spend half of all your waking hours at work. Your job ensures that you have an income, but it also provides you with sense of community, identity and development.

Your working conditions and environment – your job – are also important for other aspects of your life. Obviously you want your everyday life at work to be as good as possible.

You can address this by becoming a member of Parat. We provide you with both the help and tools you will need to ensure that your everyday life at work is even better.

Parat is a trade union for anyone seeking:

- Security, a sense of community and development
- Help and advice when you need it
- Representatives who will act on your behalf
- Collective wage agreements with associated benefits
- Opportunities for career guidance, educational grants, continuing education, courses and membership activities
- Great discounts on banking and insurance, etc.
- Direct contact with solicitors and consultants when you need help, both at work and privately.
