We are denied a living wage

While the hotel industry is making large profits, employers are denying us a wage we can live on.

We can't survive on tips and goodwill

Hotel and restaurant workers earn just 76.4% of an average industrial wage. Employers cannot expect us to live on tips and goodwill from guests.

Sick pay delayed for months

In other sectors, workers are guaranteed financial security when they're ill – not us. In the public sector and among the highest-paid, this protection is standard. In hotels and restaurants, we may have to wait months to receive sick pay.
